Location

Historical Context

- Originally a sandbar known by the Squamish, Musqueam and Tsliel Waututh First Nations, as “Snauq”
- Belongs to the Government of Canada
- Developed as industrial land in 1916 by the Vancouver Harbour Commission
- By the late 1950’s most industrial use had moved off the Island

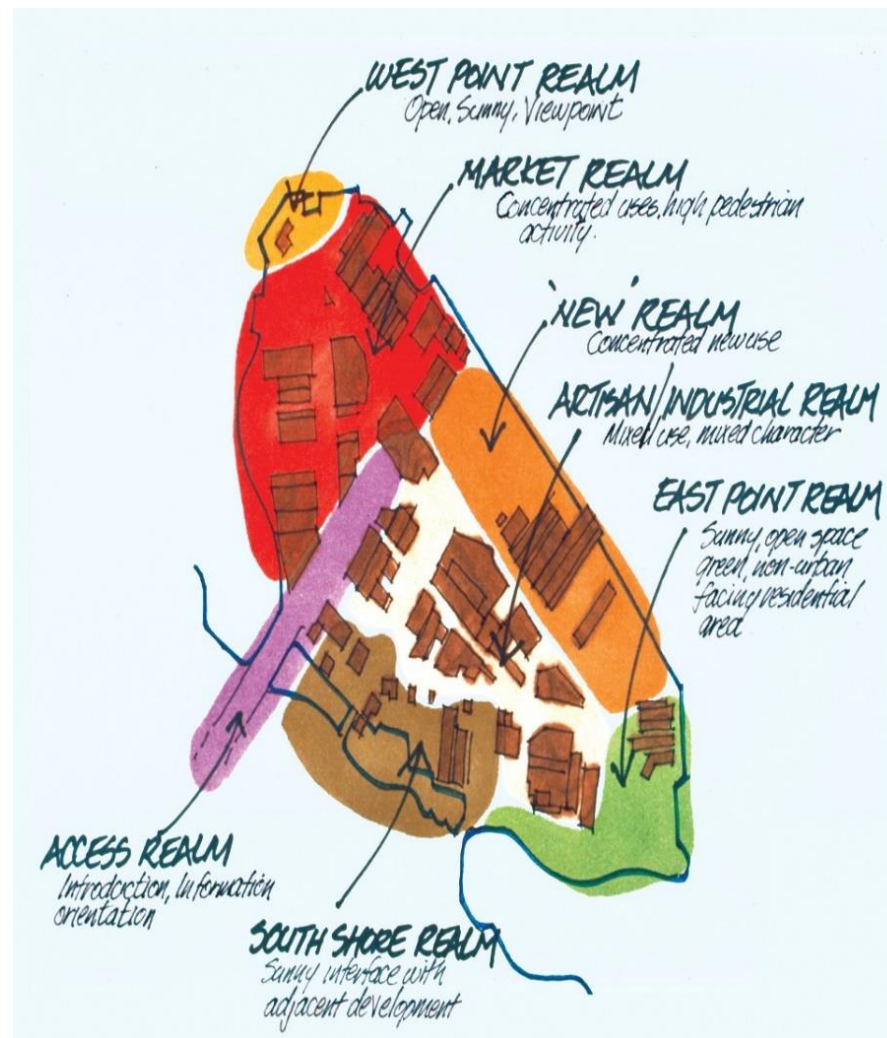

The 1960's

1972: A Plan for the Future

A people place. An urban oasis.

- Future vision:
 - Variety of land uses
 - Accessible to everyone
 - Pedestrian environment
 - Maritime experience of False Creek, public access to the water's edge
 - Re-use existing buildings; retain industrial character
 - Limit retail uses to arts & crafts, maritime products and services, and the Public Market

Today

MISSION

To steward this public land for meaningful urban and social experimentation among diverse, creative, cultural, and business models, engaging local first nations and communities, and welcoming the world.

VISION

The most inspiring public place in the world.
